In the online video, Whaley tells Dougherty to "keep your hands off me" and tells Dougherty he wouldn't "get away with that" if he worked for a woman. Many people have shared the video on Facebook, and a blogger posted the video on the Dayton subreddit. The Montgomery County Republican Party posted a link to the video on its Facebook page. Whaley responded to the post with a video of her own, saying the video misses the entire point of the confrontation. "This is not for me, it's for the people. This is not for the media, this is not for social media. This is for the people. Because I'm serious about this. I'm going to get this man," she said. Whaley's campaign posted the video on its Facebook page on Thursday. Dougherty served on Dayton Council from 2009 to 2014. The post was removed from his Facebook page. Karen Kasler, Whaley's campaign manager, said Dougherty called Dayton police before visiting the mayor's Dayton home. She said Whaley's home security footage shows Dougherty trying to come up the stairs into the home on two occasions and was asked to leave. Dougherty's attorney did not respond to a request for comment. In an interview with News 5, Dayton Chief of Police Eric White said if any crime was committed, charges would be brought. "If it were to be proven that any crime was committed, then the matter would be

I have a small app that works on desktop and Android (final release of 1.0), but I'm preparing it for the Google Play store and it works good, but I would like to know if someones could test my app to see if I've missed anything. By app I mean this app: I don't have any emulator for Android. A: You can download the Android emulator through this link. Just download the emulator and run the.apk file on the emulator. You can even see your app's logs, if you wish to debug some of the problems. You can also test on your android phone, and test on a real android phone if you have one. Q: What gives MSFT a monopoly in browser plugin development? MSFT decided to create this great new standard for browser plugin development called ActiveX. Does MSFT have a monopoly (or similar) where MSFT is not gonna give you a way to write plugins for their browser? What about Apple and their new way of developing and running plugins on the Mac OS? It seems that MSFT, in order to protect their monopoly in the browser, try to stop any other company from writing their own solution to this problem (with the new exception of Flash, but Flash is already a patented solution:
