Once this command is executed, the qmgr*.dat file will be. I guess there are some cases where a registry entry (Ndu key in ControlSet001) is adjusted. NDU (stands for Windows Network Data Usage Monitoring Driver) is a Windows component (driver), and the adjustment described in the forum post here by SidneySnell and here is supposed to improve the performance. The background is probably that there was once a memory leak in NDU in Windows 8. But that should be the last variant to try.
